

TITLE: Absorber Properties for Limiting Photovoltaic Performance

AUTHOR: Martin a. Green, University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia, 2052

Telephone: +61-2-9385-4018: Fax: +61-2-9662-4240:

Email: m.green@unsw.edu.au

This paper explores the optimal steady-state excitation conditions in a general solar absorber. It is shown that entropy generation is minimised if excitation, as measured by spontaneous emission temperature, is uniform over the absorption volume. This principle simplifies the analysis of limiting performance of advanced conversion approaches such as hot carrier and impurity photovoltaic cells.